THURADAY MORNING

ANUSEMENT.

NATURAL THATES.—The weather has its effect upon the attendance at places of amusement, as it is essential that the disposition to ealoy a good thing should not be dampened by any untoward circumstances. The mast, artistic, as well as extraordinarily clever tricks of Professor Haselmayer, are but moderately patronized in consequence. But two nights more remain of his engagement. Brighter skies and a milder stmoophere, it is hoped, will insure him such audjences as his gentus merits, for the remainder of his stay to Washington. A large portion of the public, if they know what astonishing feats he performs, would not lose the present opportunity to witness them. On Saturiay afternoon he gives a matinee.
